The one—and perhaps only—foreign policy issue on which President Trump and Joe Biden appear to agree is the need to end U.S. involvement in “endless wars” in the Middle East. And who can disagree? To be sure, American interests in the region have diminished but have not disappeared. Foreign policy planners in both political parties are trying to find new ways to advance U.S. interests—fighting terrorism, supporting allies and pushing back against Russia and China—with a smaller footprint; that is, to do more with less. Europe can help find an answer...

Read the full article on the Hill website. ✨

The Hill
RECOMMENDED

BRIEF ANALYSIS

Diplomacy Between Italy and Egypt at a Low Point
May 7, 2021

Giulia V. Anderson

BRIEF ANALYSIS

An Expanded Agenda for U.S.-Israel Partnership: New Technologies, New Opportunities
May 7, 2021

Michael Eisenstadt,
Henry "Trey" Obering III,
Samantha Ravich,
David Pollock

BRIEF ANALYSIS

Kawader Hezbollah al-Qudama (the Old-timer Hezbollah Cadres)
May 6, 2021

Hamdi Malik,
Michael Knights

TOPICS

U.S. Policy
The Washington Institute seeks to advance a balanced and realistic understanding of American interests in the Middle East and to promote the policies that secure them.

The Institute is a 501(c)3 organization; all donations are tax-deductible.

© 2021 All rights reserved.