While March 12th marks fifty years of dictatorship and terror in Syria since Hafez al-Assad’s infamous coup d’état, March 15th is the 10th anniversary of the Syrian revolution against the Assad regime. For most Syrians, since at least 2011, the very idea of home is shifting beneath their feet. A whole nation has gone forcibly homeless during the past ten years. Having fled my hometown, Damascus, in 2005 as a result of direct death threats from Bashar al-Assad, my family and I still continue to struggle to make sense of the idea of home...

Read the full article on the JMEPP website.
RECOMMENDED

BRIEF ANALYSIS

The Rise of “Bonapartism” in Iran
Apr 30, 2021
Mehdi Khalaji

Profile: Sharia Youth Gathering
Apr 29, 2021
Hamdi Malik, Crispin Smith, Michael Knights

BRIEF ANALYSIS

Syrian Kurdish Concerns over Russian-Turkish Compromise in Syria
Apr 29, 2021
John Saleh

TOPICS

Arab and Islamic Politics  Democracy and Reform

REGIONS & COUNTRIES

Syria
The Washington Institute seeks to advance a balanced and realistic understanding of American interests in the Middle East and to promote the policies that secure them.

The Institute is a 501(c)3 organization; all donations are tax-deductible.