

Policy Analysis /
Articles & Op-Eds

Iran's Gift to President Biden

by Michael Singh

Aug 1, 2021

Also available in

Farsi

Also published in Wall Street Journal

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Michael Singh

Michael Singh is the Lane-Swig Senior Fellow and managing director at The Washington Institute.

Articles & Testimony

Although Tehran's specific JCPOA demand may not be feasible, it opens the door to negotiating a new nuclear deal.

Iran's demand that the 2015 nuclear deal be modified to circumscribe a future U.S. president's ability to withdraw unilaterally may be a blessing in disguise ("Iran's Latest Nuclear Demand," Review & Outlook, July 26). The proposal would amount to a serious modification of the original agreement. As such, it signals a desire by Iran not simply to return to "mutual compliance" with the accord, but to renegotiate it.

While the Biden administration should not—and, constitutionally, likely cannot—agree to Tehran's proposal, it should welcome the chance to renegotiate rather than simply re-enter the nuclear deal. President Biden has called for a "stronger, longer" agreement, making the need to replace the deal a matter of bipartisan consensus. Concluding such an agreement, or even getting Iran to the table to discuss it, won't be easy. But re-entering the original deal first and relinquishing the economic leverage provided by sanctions seem likely to make it even harder.

Iran's reluctance to accept Mr. Biden's offer of a return to mutual compliance with the 2015 deal offers an opportunity to move to a new phase of diplomacy. The U.S. should respond to Iran's demands for alterations to the deal by putting on the table its own ideas for strengthening the agreement, moving directly to negotiation of the stronger, longer accord that successive U.S. administrations have desired.

Michael Singh is the Lane-Swig Senior Fellow and managing director at The Washington Institute. This letter to the editor was originally published in the Wall Street Journal. ❖

View/Print Page as PDF

SHARE

SHARE THIS

EMAIL ALERTS

Sign Up

TO TOP

RECOMMENDED

BRIEF ANALYSIS

Growing Pains: The Promise and Reality of Biden's Middle East Policy

Jan 24, 2022

Leonardo Jacopo Maria Mazzucco , Kristian Alexander

ARTICLES & TESTIMONY

A Needed Warning for Yemen's Rebels—and for Our Allies and Enemies Alike

Jan 24, 2022

Dennis Ross

BRIEF ANALYSIS

Militia Lionization of Esmail Qaani: Consolidation or Covering Embarrassment?

Jan 24, 2022

◆
Hamdi Malik,
Michael Knights

TOPICS

Proliferation

U.S. Policy

REGIONS & COUNTRIES

Iran

STAY UP TO DATE

SIGN UP FOR EMAIL ALERTS

1111 19th Street NW - Suite 500
Washington D.C. 20036
Tel: 202-452-0650
Fax: 202-223-5364

Contact

Press Room

Subscribe

The Washington Institute seeks to advance a balanced and realistic understanding of American interests in the Middle East and to promote the policies that secure them.

The Institute is a 501(c)3 organization; all donations are tax-deductible.

© 2022 All rights reserved.