Join us for an expert webcast exploring options for the United States to influence Iranian strategic calculus away from a decision to resume active pursuit of nuclear weapons. Watch live starting at 12:00 p.m. EST (1700 GMT) on Tuesday, December 13, 2022.
As Iran builds up its stockpile of high-enriched uranium—the culmination of a decades-long effort to become an advanced nuclear threshold state—concerns are growing that it may reconsider its hedging policy and return to active pursuit of nuclear weapons. Domestic unrest and succession preparations by an emboldened leadership further complicate this picture, as do the Ukraine war and great power tensions abroad. In light of this rising challenge, what can the United States do to constrain Tehran’s nuclear aspirations?

To address these questions, The Washington Institute is pleased to announce a virtual Policy Forum with Suzanne Maloney, Mahsa Rouhi, and Michael Eisenstadt, author of the new Institute study Iran’s Nuclear Hedging Strategy: Shaping the Islamic Republic’s Proliferation Calculus (/node/17799).

Watch this event live starting at 12:00 p.m. EST (1700 GMT) on Tuesday, December 13, 2022.

Suzanne Maloney is vice president and director of the Foreign Policy Program at the Brookings Institution, where her research focuses on Iran and Persian Gulf energy. She has advised both Democratic and Republican administrations on Iran policy.

Mahsa Rouhi is a research fellow with the Center for Strategic Research at National Defense University’s Institute for National Strategic Studies, where she focuses on nuclear policy and security strategy in the Middle East, with particular emphasis on Iran.

Michael Eisenstadt is the Kahn Fellow and director of the Military and Security Studies Program at The Washington Institute, focusing on Gulf and Arab-Israeli security affairs.
